ANTARCTICA VETERANS--Rudolf Honkala of Bethel gets acquainted with Antarctic sled dog Jake, Honkala worked in Antarctica in the 1950s and '60s as a meteorologist and scientific leader. He was one of about 60 people who attended an open house to meet the dogs Friday at Mahoosuc Guide Service, After stretching their legs in Newry over the weekend, Jake and six of his teammates left Tuesday for a new home with the Inuit of Hudson Bay. Dog team handlers are scheduled to hold a press conference today in Montreal. Bethel veterinarian Gary Stuer volunteered to check the dogs out after their long trip from the south, and found them in good shape, according to Polly Mahoney of the guide service. Six older sled dogs are staying in Newry until it can be determined how and where to establish a breeding program for them.

Newry to form roads committee

By WENDY HANSCOM

Sunday River Ski Resort and Newry planners have agreed to set aside two resort applications for new roads until a selectman-appointed task force completes a study of road options in the Sunday

River valley.
The Newry Planning Board voted unanimously last week to ask selectmen to appoint a task force to look at roads already proposed for the valley, and other possible routes to current and future ski area devel-

The resort has already submitted an application for a second access road, just north of the current access road. The new road would begin just beyond the fire station and con-tinue on to parking lot five on Brookside Drive.

In addition, the resort already has town and state Department of Environmental Protection approval to go into the Jordan Bowl area from an extension of the Monkey Brook Road,

The third road is an alternative approach to Jordan Bowl, which would bridge the Sunday River above the Blueberry Mountain Inn, near one of the town's old school-

Planning Board Chairman Don Sandstrom said Wednesday evening that in his opinion the board could not properly evaluate all the issues surrounding the proposed roads until the snow is gone and high water season has been studied.

Sandstrom read a letter from selectman Steve Wight suggesting that the board explore alternatives to the roads the skiway has proposed. "It would seem a master road plan would serve everyone better than a piecemeal approach," Wight's letter

Sandstrom agreed. "I have suggested to both Steve Wight and Les Otten (Sunday River owner) that we form a task force to look at this problem of roads," he said. "In the past Sunday River has submitted applications to this board that deal strictly with in-house building and development. This is the first time they have submitted an application that also interfaces with town property or roads. I suggest we look at it very carefully,' The Planning Board has already held a public hearing on the alternate Jordan Bowl road and

The board was supposed to make a decision on the application within 30 days of the Feb. 28 public hearing, according to town ordinances. But Sunday River officials agreed last week to set aside the deadline and work with the task force.

First forest council session in Bethel today Public input sought on NFLC's draft recommendations

By MICHAEL DANIELS

By MICHAEL DANIELS

The first of more than 20 "listening sessions" on the draft recommendations of the Northern Forest Lands Council will kick off today (Wednesday) at the Bethel Inn.

The 33 recommendations are contained in a report entitled "Finding Common Ground," They are intended to be draft guidelines for the future management of the 26stretches from Maine to New York's Adirondack Mountains.

Following the listening sessions, and a 75-day response period, a final set of recommendations will be submitted to Congress and the governors of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and New York.

The council, an ad hoc advisory group with no regulatory or land ac-million acre Northern Forest, which quisition powers, will then dissolve by Sept. 30.

Both camps happy?

Initial response to the council's recommendations has been consistently positive -- even from groups which seldom see eye to eye on such matters, particularly the forest products industry and en-specific when discussing changes in tax laws or governmental policy that would help preserve the Northern Forest as a working woodland. But they are generally vague when it comes to discussing issues such as forest practices, biodiversity, or land acquisition by the federal government.

That emphasis has pleased those who currently make their living from forest products.

"I'd give it a B-plus, I was pleasantly surprised," said Leon Favreau, co-owner of Bethel Furniture Stock and president of the Natoinal Multiple-Use Association.

Favreau, a vocal critic of environmental activism, characterized the draft as "a major blow to the environmental community -- they wanted it to emphasize acquisition, and controlling local land use," he

"This is a tool they've used in other parts of the country to control local land use, but it's not working this time," he said.

"The thing I liked the best is that the recommendations call on the states to study excessive regulations --that's great."

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE SPILLS OVER-Bethel Police Chief Dale Bellman is blaming a Rumford domestic dispute for two acts of vandalism Monday night at the Cole Block. The vandal broke the window of W.J. And to the Maine Audubon Society's Karen Tilberg, Larry Mason's presence here was initially a puzzle: "What is his relevance to what we are trying to do?" she asked. But now, after some reflection,

Is Mason's past in our future? Favreau thinks Mason's relevance is self-evident -environmentalists put him out of business by shutting off the supply of timber to his Washington State sawmill. And Favreau is convinced those same environmental groups are now working to do the same here.

Tilberg thinks Mason may indeed have a lot to teach

Mason is currently an associate director of the Washington Commercial Forest Action Committee; he is a former director of the Alliance for America, a nationwide Wise-Use and property-rights organization.

His visit to the Bethel area is being sponsored by the Multiple Use Association, Boise-Cascade and a New Hampshire landowners' right organization.

Mason's sawmill, located in Forks, near the northern tip of the Olympic Peninsula, closed in 1991 when he was no longer able to obtain timber from the nearby Olympic National Forest.

Court injunctions intended to protect the spotted owl had effectively closed down logging in the national forest two years earlier, Mason said.

The mill, which he had started 12 years earlier, had at its peak employed 40 people, Since the mill closed, Mason has devoted much of his time to the so-called "Wise-Use" movement, "I am concerned about what's happened in America and for the last few years I have been sharing my story," Mason told The Citizen. Mason, who has been meeting with a number of

Annual Town Meetings

Former G'wood selectman wants changes

GREENWOOD

By MICHAEL DANIELS

With the town's municipal budget down slightly and no new regulatory initiatives on the warrant, the hottest topics at Green-wood's annual Town Meeting Saturday are likely to be three articles submitted by former selectman Raymond Seames.

The three articles are an explicit challenge to the town's current selectmen -- who have recommended against voter approval for two of the articles, and have rewritten the remaining article (which was submitted after the formal deadline for warrant articles).

Seames is asking voters to consider adopting a town manager form of government, to strip the selectmen's power to sell tax-acquired land without Town-Meeting approval, and to eliminate the fees charge for brown goods at the stump dump.

Selectmen have proposed taking money from the following fund balance accounts (last year's figure in parentheses): $80,000 ($30,000) from state revenue sharing, $3,035.29 ($0) from property tax relief, $180,000 ($150,000) from

ATTITUDE ADJUSTMENT NEEDED

To the Editor:

Relocate the B.E.A.R.S. rescue barn to the fire station? The B.E.A.R.S. wish to be together with the fire department? When they were at the fire station they couldn't get along with them either. So, why would it be any different now? They don't appear to get along with anyone, even themselves.

My memory serves me quite well as a former member and director of the B.F.A.R.S. We, at one point in time and indeed still have a working relationship with the Bethel Area Health Center. Maybe some of their statt have had a turnover, but I'm sure their protocols have remained the same, and I'm sure its a two-way street.

The B.E.A.R.S. should accept their protocols if they expect the health center to accept theirs. They both have, I hope, the same ultimate goal what's best for the patient. There are too many personalities and politics getting in the way.

If a responsible effort were made, I'm sure the two could get along, After all, they both are very important to the Bethel area. If someone has been made to look like a perfect idiot, perhaps you should look long and hard at why instead of trying to shift blame to others. Sometimes people don't need any help in that department, they do it them-

Lots of towns share facilities when the fire and rescue are combined. That would be great; however, I doubt if Bethel's could get along well enough to do that. Not in the foreseeable future. A lot of attitude adjustment is needed first.

ATTEND THE NFLC SESSION

To the Editor:

I'm writing to make the public to attend one of the Northern Forest Lands Council's Open Houses and Listening Sessions. The first of a series of five take place at the Bethel Inn on Wednesday, March 23. Subsequent sessions will take place in Abbot Village, Portland, Ellsworth and Presque Isle.

The Open Houses and Listening Sessions are part of the council's effort to srek people's reactions to its draft recommendation report, Finding Common Ground." The council's draft recommendations seek to reinforce the region's traditional ways of life and patterns of ownership and uses of the Laid. The public comment period on this report begain on March 3 and will end on May 16.

All Open Houses will begin at 1 p.m. and run until 5 p.m. They are designed as an informal, self-guided introduction to the issues that form the basis of the council's draft recommendations. Staff will be on hand to answer any questions during the Open Houses,

46. Listening Sessions will begin at 7 p.m. Listening Sessions give people the apportunity to speak to the council on the draft recomtiendations and provide people the opportunity to hear what others are saying about the report. All sessions will be moderated. People will have three minutes to state their case to allow everyone a chance to speak. Speakers will sign up in advance and be selected at random. As he purpose of the Listening Sessions is to give council members a chance to haven to as many people as possible, there will be no opperfections for dialogue. Any questions during the Listening Sessions will be recorded and responded to after the sessions.

Again, I myste the public to attend an Open House and Listening Sesstatute find our more about the Northern Forest Lands Council's work and to offer their reaction to "Finding Common Ground," Anyone tending news information may call me at 287-4906 during normal tumber huggs.

LAST CHANCE FOR INPUT

I have a critical opportunity to be heard on an issue of i dispetitional when the Northern Forest Lands Council holds a pubstream steam at the Bethel Inn on March 23.

the Council is gathering public reaction to its draft recommendaor a traced on March 3, for the future of the 26-million acre Northern of that stretches from Maine, through northern New Hampshire and 13th M. and across New York State. This is the public's last chance to authorized the Conneil's final recommendations which go to Congress and the governors of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and New York Philips of Miller Property

The future viability of the regional forest economy, the ecological intograty of the forest itself, and the long tradition of public access and showned of this extraordinary natural resource are all at stake. Now to the time for all citizens with a love for the forest, and a stake in it; fature, to speak out for: Strong and diversified economies for Northern Forest com-tastastics, and recognition that long-term economic growth depends on the long-term health of the forest itself.

2. Healthy, managed forests capable of supporting timber and other sorest industries over the long-term; economic incentives to encourage private timberland owners to be good stewards of the land.

Permanent protection of core wild areas to preserve the diverse species of wildlife and vegetation that characterize the region, and to assure a healthy Northern Forest for generations to come.

This is a balanced approach that will ensure a healthy environment and protect jobs.

We urge your readers to attend the Northern Forest Lands Council Listening Session on March 23, and to speak up for the future of the

CONGRATULATIONS, OMERS

To the Editor:

Congratulations to all the SAD44 OM teams who participated in the Odyssey of the Mind Western Regional Competition in Farmington last Saturday.

You demonstrated so many valuable, positive qualities such as cooperation, leadership, sportsmanship and incredible creativity and talent throughout your presentations. You were competing against many schools where the students were able to work daily on their "problem" because it was part of their curriculum.

Consequently, the competition was tough, but you've made us all proud with your scores in the Long Term and Spontaneous components of this competition. Good luck and best wishes to the middle school and high school teams that placed first in their divisions and will go on to the state championships in Orono later this spring. Again, your time, talent, and effort has paid off.

We're very grateful to the coaches of the various teams, Many thanks to Nancy Grover, Jean Bass, Donna Richard, Walter Hatch, Althea Stevens, Debbie Gilbert, Sue Gavett, Deb Dohrmann, Denise Roderick and Dan Grover for donating their time and patience to the participants in this competition. Without you, OM wouldn't exist and the rewards for these kids goes far beyond the firsts and seconds. That's just the icing on the cake,

DRAMA ON TEEN SUICIDE

To the Editor:

Suicide is the leading cause of death in children (preceded only by motor vehicle accidents) and is on the rise in Maine. It is, therefore, a very important issue and needs to be addressed.

On March 24, 25 and 26, the Telstar Drama Department, under the direction of Bunny Latham, will produce three plays. One is titled "Boom Box," and is written by Douglas S. Clapp. The theme is teen suicide.

As co-presidents of the Telstar Drama Boosters, we are writing this letter as a caution to parents. We would like to reach as many children as possible with the objective of opening lines of communication with adults. However, as we want to present the play in a responsible manner, we advise parents to accompany their teenagers if possible. Also, we advise them to use their discretion with regard to children under 13.

There will be a panel of counselors and clergy available at each performance for the purpose of discussion following the play. The names and telephone numbers of area clergy and the number of the Youth Crisis Stabilization Hotline will be printed in the programs.

"Boom Box" is last on the program, and there will be an intermission preceding it, should anyone feel it necessary to leave at that time.

I hope all will come and show their support for the students and for this very important issue.

Sandra K. Dennis, Linda Gilbert Co-Presidents, Telstar Drama Boosters

From the Bethel Police log:

Police make two arrests

Thursday, police arrested a Bethel man for operating under the influence, attempting to clude police and driving to endanger. Police were initially called to Bethel Park Apartments to investigate a complaint of an unwanted subject. Police interviewed Steven G. Evans, 42, of Bethel, who said he was trying to talk to a friend. Police felt Evans might be intoxicated and conducted a field sobriety test, which he had trouble passing. Evans was advised not to operate a motor vehicle. Police later checked the BPA area again, and saw Evans leaving the complex in his vehicle, according to the report. Evans did not stop for the cruiser with its lights and siren on. He went out Route 5 and headed west on Route 2 with police in pursuit. Evans eventually pulled over in Gilead and was arrested for OUI, cluding police and driving to endanger. He was transported to Oxford County Jail.

Police arrested another Bethel man Wednesday. Police were first called to the Bethel Inn on a domestic dispute report at 11 p.m. A verbal disagreement between a male and female subject had turned physical, according to the police report. Both subjects were given witness statements to fill out. About an hour-and-a-half later, police came across the same couple on Mason Street. The man was throwing some of the woman's clothing into a parking lot. Police advised the woman to pick up a few things and find a place to stay for the night. According to the police report the man began yelling loudly at the woman and refused to stop yelling after police advised him to. David Pilot, 27, of Bethel was arrested for disorderly conduct and transported to Oxford County Jail.

In other police news last week, Bethel police assisted a state trooper on March 15 with an OUI arrest in Bryant Pond.

Saturday, police warned two juveniles to stop riding their bikes on the porch of the Bethel House on Main

LOCAL CONTROL

Today is an important day for the citizens of Bethel. The federally funded Northern Forest Lands Council (NFLC) had as its mission "to reinforce the traditional patterns of land ownership and uses of large forest areas in the [26 million acres of] Northern Forest of Maine, New Hampshire, New York and Vermont, which have characterized these lands for decades." The Council's Draft Recommendations for "public policy changes affecting" this 26 million acres of forest-land are found in their report, Finding Common Ground, which was released on March 3rd. Bethel, (which is included within the study area), is the site of the first of a number of public hearings on the draft recommendations formulated by the NFLC. The Council is seeking public comment on its 33 draft recommendations before formulating its final report and plan of action which will be submitted to Congress.

The Multiple Use Association gave its tentative support for the Study as long as The NFLC did the following: 1. Considered local people first; 2. Studied real problems and; 3. Doesn't make it easier for national environmental groups to take control of local land use. We give the report a B+ because we feel that generally it has met our criteria (there are some problems). Such studies and reports have usually worked against the interest of local

Despite our initial support for the Report, we feel that THERE IS STILL GREAT POTENTIAL DANGER. Hearings on the draft recommendations will be held in New York City, Boston, Connecticut and Concord, N.H.. Twenty thousand copies of the report have been printed, and we expect that many comments will be generated by national environmental groups from all parts of the country. In essence, people from other areas can affect local land use because anyone who wishes can comment on the draft recommendations. All public comments on the draft recommendations will be considered by The Council as it develops it final report and Action Plan. Therefore, it is essential that as many people as possible within the study area comment on the Council's recommendations so that local people help to direct the future of their own forest land. Most rural residents will agree that government land use policies have been dominated by national environmental groups and too often have lacked common sense and have gone against the needs of local people.

We need local people to attend the open house at the Bethel Inn Conference Center today between 1PM and 5PM to learn more about the Study. In addition, we need local citizens to make comments on the Report at the listening session between 7PM and 10PM. You may also write the Council before May 16, 1994. You may call the NFLC at 603-224-6590 to request a copy of the Report. Comments supporting local control (under recommendation #29) would be appreciated along with any other specific comments on the report you may have.

Our Association supports tourism.

However, some environmental zealots will be here today to try to control how we live. Look for salmon hats, wolf costumes or people who act like they have been anointed. None the less, we need to be nice to all visitors and to that end we are listing 55 suggested questions to help local citizens communicate with those who show they want to control us.

- 1. When will there be enough land owned and controlled by the federal government?
- 2. Will there ever be enough regulations controlling people and land use?
- 3. What is your favorite greenline area to visit or do you feel happy just knowing they're there?
- 4. Why does the environmental movement show so little compassion for
- 5. Where have you EVER helped local economies?
- 6. Do you send money to the unemployed timber workers in the Pacific
- 7. Were you surprised with the results of the Wilderness Society Study that determined that displaced timber workers had to take a 50% cut in pay or move to the city?
- 8. Will you be able to feed, clothe and shelter us after you close down agriculture, industry and forestry?
- 9. Do you agree with Preserve Appalachian Wilderness (PAW) that disease in people is good because there are too many people?
- 10. Why are you and the Environmental Grantmakers Association (EGA) obsessed with controlling local land use in an area where you don't even live?
- 11. Do you get any of the 100's of millions of dollars the EGA gives annually to environmental groups?
- 12. Which is most important, a big environmental association budget or a good environment? 13. Have you considered going to formerly communist countries to help
- them improve their environment? 14. Do you know of any country that has better scientifically substantiated
- (by peer review) forest management practices than the United States? 15. Do you know of any alternative raw material to wood that is so readily renewable, and which also helps to improve the environment as nature
- produces it? 16. Do you know of any alternative material to use in homebuilding that consumes less than 5 times as much energy to prepare?
- 17. Do you know of any raw material the US loses more of than wood because of our neglect of forests caused by regulations? 18. Do you realize that if you see nature through a New Age perspective,
- you have huge blind spots? 19. Since research doesn't show the need for reserves and corridors, which
- wildlife species told you they want private corridors to travel between their reserves?
- 20. Why do you have closed door meetings that exclude local people when discuss local control?
- 21. What did National Audubon Society Vice President Brock Evans mean when he said at a 1990 partially closed door meeting in Bethel, "let's take it all back."
- 22. What did Mr. Evans mean when he said "be unreasonable, you can do it. Today's hearsay is tomorrow's wisdom?"
- 23. What did he mean when he said the Northern Forest Lands Campaign would be even bigger that the Ancient Forest Campaign of the Pacific Northwest?. 24. What did then Wilderness Society employee Michael Kellett mean when
- he said local people don't understand the forests because they are too close to them? 25. Did you agree with Governor Cuomo when he said that the decisions
- regarding management of private land in the Adirondack Park couldn't be left to those (local people) who were less intelligent?

the truth and what is scientifically significant.

26. Why do you think you are smarter than local people? 27. Do you really believe that your efforts to have more federal control, extremely restrictive regulations, and shutting down economic use if forestland really shows you "care" more than local residents and users of the Forest?

- 28. Why does the leadership of the big environmental organizations believe that 1) protecting rights of landowners, 2) conducting risk assessments, and 3) opposing unfunded federal mandates is an "unholy trinity?"
- 29. Do you believe our water and air quality and forest health are worse than 20 years ago?
- 30. How many pounds of CO2 did you create driving up here?
- 31. Are you appreciative that we have healthy growing forests locally that can absorb the CO2 you produced?
- 32. Do you know which day our environment will finally fail?
- 33. Do you know what common sense means?
- 34. What did the Appalachian Mountain Club mean when they said "There are some members of the Council who continue to resist the fact that we need a stronger hand in guiding change, and that having the federal government involved continues to be an asset?"
- 35. Was the original intent of your environmental group to control private land use?
- 36. Do you consider preventing land use as important as stopping the Vietnam War was? 37. Have you considered saving to buy your own land so you can manage it
- the way you would like? 38. Why doesn't the 2.5+ Billion Dollar (annual) Environmental Industry spend more money buying land and less trying to get the government to buy
- 39. How do you explain that during the high development years of the 1980's only 0.1% of forest land over 500 acres sold was converted for
- 40. Do you agree with Governor Cuomo that people who live in pretty areas
- have to accept the added burden of extra regulations?
- 41. What books helped you shape your emotions about nature?
- 42. What percentage of the new science of Conservation Biology is hard science and how much is philosophy?.
- 43. Which part do you like best?
- 44. Have you ever toured a Tree Farm and talked to the owner about how he manages his land?
- 45. Do you believe everything was better before the white man came here? 46. How do you know?
- 47. Does that include the 20 to 50 million acres of forest land that burned each year before we started to manage forest land?
- Have you considered reintroducing the wolf in Concord, Massachusetts before doing it here? 49. Why aren't you honest with the public about the fact the Society of
- Conservation Biology claims that it would take 100 Million acres more than all the land in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Rhode Island. Connecticut combined! - to maintain a viable population of 1000 wolves?
- 50. How do you explain the INCREASE in biodivesity that occurs after a harvest and after the Sierra Club photo is taken? 51. Do you prefer to use substantiated science in making decisions about
- our environment or do you prefer to act on your emotions? 52. Do you understand there is a difference between criticizing extreme unsubstantiated scare stories made by environmental leaders and criticizing legitimate efforts to improve the environment?
- 53. Do you think it is a good idea for government to determine the cost and effectiveness of environmental regulations?
- Would you support legislation requiring environmentalists to be licensed, to follow a code of ethics and to use only substantiated science? 55. Which part of the country is targeted next for land use control?

BOY SCOUT TROOP 565

On March 12 and 13 some of the Boy Scouts went on a winter camp out on the Bog Brook in Gilead. Some of the boys set up the tents while the others got firewood for later when it got cold.

The boys enjoyed an afternoon of sliding on the crust. Axel Annis and Jayson Hebert tried to slide under the crust and had some pretty red faces to prove it.

Visitors to the camp out on Saturday afternoon were two Cub Scouts, Mark and Adam Tanguay and two Cub leaders, Lorraine and Gene Tanguay, all of Albany.

The Boy Scouts who went on the camp out were: Matt Ryerson, Axel Annis, Freeman Corriveau, Matt Koskela, Brent Lake, and Jayson Hebert. The leaders who went to brave the cold were Ray Cooley

Local OM teams do well

Six teams from the Bethel area competed in the OM Regional competition Saturday at Mt. Blue High School. One Telstar Middle School team and the Telstar High School team placed first and will compete for the state competition April 9 and 10 in Orono.

The Middle School team, coached by Jean Bass and Donna Richard, created an analogy to the Greek story, "The Iliad," relating it to Pearl Harbor and the later atomic bombing of Japan. Members of the team include: Katie Chapman, Laurie Young, Caitlin Bass, Martha Grover, Teri Chadbourne and Michelle McInnis.

The Telstar High School team created several vehicles for the MTV (mini-terrain vehicles) project. These cars had to pass over and around specific objects and break a balloon at the finish line. Members of the team include Lydia Grover, Dawn Seames, Melissa Laura Seames, Becky Chandler, Martha Grover and Theresa Curtis. They were coached by Nancy and Dan Grover,

Other individual and group awards were presented for creativity. Chelsea Marshall was honored for her accurate performance of a circus elephant. Jeff Gavett was given an award for sportsmanship. The Telstar Middle School, which performed "The Iliad," received an additional award for creativity, set design and music, Nancy Grover was recognized for her organization of the regional competition.

A Crescent Park School team and one Telstar Middle School team performed in Fur, Fin and Feather, where an animal takes on four feelings or emotions.

Members of the Crescent Park team were Chelsea Marshall, Colin Penley, Paige Brown, Danny Stevens, Darcy Buker, Thomas Parsons and Sarah Reed. Coaches were Debbie Gilbert and Althea Stevens.

Middle School team members were Phoebe Brown, Sarah Paul, Shawna Roderick, Jenny Wheeler and Sarah Crocker. The coach was Nancy Grover. This team placed fourth overall.

Crescent Park built a structure in "Set It Free." The team members were Ben Dohrmann, Billy Murphy, Jeff Gavett, Elizabeth Reed, Jenni Whitman, Jay Hanscom, Emmet Donovan. Their coaches were Debbie Dohrmann, Sue Gavett and Dave Murphy. They placed fifth overall (third in the spontaneous and fourth in style).

Another Telstar Middle School team performed in OM Music, where three unique musical instruments were built. Team members were Kayce Gilbert, Heather Roderick, Emily Parsons, Lisa Crowell and Nick Smith. The coaches were Walter Hatch and Denise Roderick.

Estimated Tax Rules Change

This article is brought to you by Jane Gray, CPA

Congress usually isn't known for making life simpler for the rest of us. But one of the few bright spots in the new tax law is that making quarterly estimated tax payments is easier now than it has been in the last few years. This is especially true for upper-income taxpayers whose income fluctuates annually.

For 1994, if your adjusted gross income (AGI) is above $150,000 ($75,000 if married filing separatery), you can assid underpayment penalties by making quarterly tax estimates totalling 110% of your 1993 tax or 90% of your 1994 tax. If your AGI is $150,000 or less, you can pay either 100% of your 1993. tax or 90% of your 1994 tax. The 110% and 100% payments of the prior year's tax are often called "safe harbors" adhering to these percentages guards against penalites for underpayment.

The 110% safe harbor replaces the complex requirement which still applied to certain taxpayers in 1993. To avoid underpayment penalties in 1993, you had to prepay at least 90% of your actual 1993 tax if (1) your 1993 adjusted gross income exceeded $75,000, (2) your 1993 modified AGI exceeded your 1992 AGI by more than $40,000, and (3) you paid or should have paid estimated taxes in 1990, 1991, and 1992. Determining the correct payment each quarter was difficult and time-consuming. Whatever your income, you can pay taxes through withholding, quarterly estimates, or both. You always avoid underpayment penalites by paying your full tax liability throughout the current year.

The 1994 estimated tax payment due dates are April 15, 1994; June 15, 1994; September 15, 1994; and January 16, 1995. When you're finalizing your 1993 taxes, don't forget your first 1994 estimated payment. Corner of Vernon & Main Streets Bethel = 824-2802

(your grandmother) to tame them. Claire hated the bother of them: I would have killed to have all that body and bounce... and without benefit of artificial applications, yet!

Memories of Claire, your mother, my cousins and occasional playmate, spring up at the slightest provocation, it seems. Just the other day, I was sorting through old photos that my sister Jane salvaged from assignment to the rubbish (why do our elders do that?... Muddy, my mother, your grand aunt must somehow feel that since she no longer has a desire to be reminded of the "old days," we "kids" won't either... WRONG! WRONG! WRONG!)... well anyway, there was little Claire in her First Communion dress; standing proudly on the lawn of her paternal grandmother (which, by the way, to add to the convolution and possibility of confusion, was also the lawn of my grand aunts Nell and Anne, who were absolutely no relation to your great-grandmother!). The grand red curls were tamed but proudly apparent under the veil of innocence that your mother wore

A few moments later I came across a photo of little me, the scrawny one, on my day of white-ness and purity. There I stood, by the rose arbor, in my organdy splendor (nylon and polyester were fabrics of the future when we were six), my smile marked by one baby and one second front tooth, my blonde hair plaited in two thin braids tied at the ends with two thin white ribbons. I was struck by the differences between the two little communicants, "own" cousins by virtue of the sisterhood of their mothers. One was full size, endowed with curls and plenteous freckles; the other was small, bordering on birdlike, devoid of warming flesh or abundance of locks. And it was the differences recalled that started my contemplation of how such factors influence our interactions without

When a person walks into our "space," or we walk into his, how do we decide on our welcoming behavior? What criteria do we use to determine our response? Just as I compared the two photos of the girl cousins and decided that the larger, heftier, curlier one was Claire, and the skinny, tumbled off her tongue just before it braided one was C.B., our computer-on-the-spot brains will note fat/thin, tall/short, light/dark, male/female, happy/grumpy, rich/poor, known/unknown, friendly/unfriendly, safe/unsafe... and so on. In just a split second all these variables are sorted and used to decide if any response is appropriate or even called for. What's really interesting about the process, is that some of the criteria are factual, apparent, objective, as they say. These are the visual or audible signals of physical attributes. They are seen as the same by all observers. They are basically undisputable, as it were, things about the person that are part of the visible package. And then there are the attitudes that the newcomer dismatch in our stored experience. These are the traits of behavior that we watch in the first instant of encounter to help us decide on the weltance or the fear. The matching and the comparing are by their very na-memories to determine our judgment of the acceptability of the person in question. And herein lies the rub. Herein we all take liberties with the memories and with the process... Let me explain. If I am thin and spry and content, do I then attach value to thinness and spryness? Do I also equate contentment with thin and spry? Do I then judge the roly-poly person with the lead weights in his shoes to be discontented? And what's worse, do I presume that only thinness and only spryness are valuable traits?... Likewise, if I am tall and blond do I assign my gold stars to the litheness and the flaxen hair and thus exclude from my system of merit those who are not tall and not blonde? When the short, smiling, handsome man with the dirty fingernails walks by do I stop at the fingernails, and rule him unacceptable, or do I further classify him as unworthy because of his shortness, a fact of genetics over which he has absolutely no control? Because you attend the church of St. Patrick and I don't, do I get to exclude you or you to exclude me? Because some of us fill the Union Church and others the Bible Church, do we use these criteria as our only bits for judgment of each other?

Once, when a telephone "friend" saw me for the first time, her un-got all twisted up in her attempts to apologize. And as I coolly responded, "I manage," I was abruptly confronted with the truth of some people's prejudice in the real sense of the term.

The lesson, I guess, lies in how we use the information given and the information stored. We have so many choices to make with each encounter; we get to include the smile and the good looks in the bag with the dirty fingernails and the dif-ference in height. We choose our churches and our politics and our backyards; we don't have a thing to say about skin color or height! We should remember that when next we watch the newcomer approach! Your mother was unlike me, but we shared genetics and friendship... plays that we note as we search for a and I got to wear her hand-medowns! Article II -- Vehicles. May all of my children be provided with transportation beyond themselves; perhaps a hobby, or better still service to others only they could perform as a talent that renews the spirit.

Article III -- Personal items. I bequeathed to each child a jewel box filled with glistening memories of their childhood, some things made us cry together, but there were Halloween pumpkins, or a rose bush in the back yard, or falling stars to wish upon, a bag of tiny diamonds containing bedtime kisses and hugs, homemade Valentines, adorable pets and jugs of Kool Aid on a holiday.

Article IV -- Stocks and Bonds. Finally, I leave my children enough stock in the bonds of love that they can keep on investing in others for the length of their lives.

Article V -- Taxes. Lastly, before taxes are levied on this estate, please deduct and forgive cross words spoken, of times when I was too busy to listen, or missed apologies.

Winter is beautiful whether white and gray or brilliant with the early morning sun washing the fields with a rosy film turning the distant woods to a deep red-purple.

But now it's time to think spring for it is in the air. We can feel a warm touch in the sun on our cheeks, and the exquisite notes of the chickadees' songs float like a pale silk thread through the gray and white stillness of our days.

Environmental support

But environmental groups are also supporting the draft recommendations, even while acknowledging that they will probable seek to strengthen some of them.

Stephen D. Blackmer, conserva-tions programs director for the Ap-palachian Mountain Club, said the AMC "can and will support many of the recommendations offered by the council.

The council recognizes that the Northern Forest economy and its ecological health are interrelated," Blackmer said, "and that this is not a jobs-versus-the-environment issue. Many of its draft recommenda-tions will help achieve the goals of a healthy environment and strong forest-based industries."

A coalition of environmental groups, including the AMC, the Maine Audubon Society, the Sierra Club the Natural Resources Council of Maine has also issued a joint statement which characterizes the council's recommendation as a "healthy foundation on which to build." But the environmental groups also call for stronger action in the areas of rural economic development, management practices, and land use regulation.

The environmental groups also call for the "establishment of a system of conservation area to permanently safeguard exceptional public values."

One of the 10 such areas identified by the statement is "the upper Androscoggin Valley near New Hampshire."

Participation urged

Both sides are urging the public to become informed about and involved in the process.

"The council has performed an invaluable public service," the AMC's Blackmer said. "It is now up to the public to serve the council well by providing thoughtful responses to the report in the spirit of finding common ground."

Favreau agreed, if for somewhat different reasons. Participation by concerned and informed citizens is essential, he said, in order to keep the process from being dominated by "radical environmentalists who are going to go all out to influence the outcome," (See related story.)

Today's events will be divided into two parts. An open house, from 1 to 5 p.m., is intended to provide "an informal, self-guided introduction to the issues that form the basis of the council's draft recommenda-

The listening session itself, to run from 7 to 9 p.m., will give people the opportunity to respond to the recommendations and to provide further input to the process.

groups in the Bethel area, said he is concerned that the NFLC's draft recommendations are "a vehicle that sets the stage for what comes next -- there's a freight train headed in your direction. Once you lose local control, local people are screwed."

Established environmental groups are now dominated by "amoral environmental professionals," he claims, "who have no empathy at all for the human misery they are causing."

Favreau agreed "absolutely." He has expressed support for the council's current draft, but he worries that the process will be taken over by "radical en-

Favreau's definition of "radical environmentalists" includes most of the mainstream environmental groups, which he claims have been "polluted by bad science." Their ultimate objective, he believes, "is to close down all the forests and every company.

Economist says 'Don't blame the owl." Not everyone shares the Wise-Use analysis of what is troubling the Northwest timber industry -- or of where that region's economic future lies.

There's not a banker or economist out here who doesn't know what's going on," University of Oregon Professor of Economics Ed Whitelaw told The Larger, structural problems are the major cause of unemployment in the timber industry. Whitelaw arcues -- noting that in the ten years prior to the sponted-owl set-asides, the timber industry in Oregon that already laid off 17 percent of its workforce.

And in terms of the region's overall economic wellbeing, he argues, that's not necessarily an unhealthy ian. Despite the timber industry layoffs, total employment in Oregon during the 1979-89 period grew by 23 percent. In a healthy, growing economy, he argues, "some sectors of the economy mature and decline, while others grow."

And much of that region's recent growth has come from firms that were attracted by its quality of life. In an article in the journal "Old Oregon" (Winter 1992), Whitelaw quotes Bill Conerly, the chief economist for the First Interstate Bank of Oregon: "People are moving here not because of the jobs but because of quality of life," Conerly said, "If people want to live here, jobs will follow."

But does all this apply to Maine? Whitelaw thinks so. "The two regions have very much in common," he said. "Natural amenities and an attractive environ-ment are money in the bank. When there are fewer and fewer places that can offer an environment people want to live in, and more and more people who want to live there, then you don't need a Ph.D. in economics to see where your comparative ad-

Audubon says Mason's is a good example Maine Audubon spokeswoman Karen Tilberg may disagree with Larry Mason's point of view, but she said that, after some reflection, she now thinks the Northeast should heed his story.

"We should pay attention to his story, and to the stories of other loggers and fisherman out there, because they represent a situation that came about because there wasn't good planning," Tilberg said. "In some ways Larry Mason is the best possible argument for why we need to work together here -working together is the only way we can preserve the environment and avoid the pink slips.

He described the article calling for a town-manager form of government as "an idea whose time has come, or is at least in need of exam-

His initial article draft called directly for the town to make the shift to town-manager government, effective April, 1995. But because the article was submitted after the warrant deadline, the selectmen agreed to include it only if it were rewritten to call for a committee to study the town manager option.

the committee is to have a report back by the 1995 Town Meeting.

Seames, however, has said he will attempt to have the article amended to call for the committee to report back at a special Town Meeting during the year -- and in time for the change (should voters approve it) to take place by the original date of April 1995,

Seames said a town-manager government would save the town money by allowing it to compete more effectively for grants -- such as the Jobs Bond grant Woodstock recently used to build a salt/sand

A second advantage, he said, would be allowing more people to serve as selectmen. With a manager to do the background work, he argues, the selectmen would not need to spend as much time at the "Right now it's just too much of a commitment for most people," he Bartlett said the selectmen also support having a committee study the idea, "and come back to the town with an accurate picture of Seames is also calling for a change in the way the town disposes of tax-acquired property.

what it would cost."

Currently the selectmen have the authority to approve the sale of such parcels, and over the past year the town has sold, or has a contract to sell, nine parcels for a total of $115,300.

Marie Bartlett, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, argued that in addition to bringing in money, the sales put approximately $100,000 worth of property back on the tax

She said the selectmen had also studied each parcel before putting it up for sale, to determine if it would be worth keeping -- for example, if it contained usable quantities of sand or gravel.

But Seames contends that when he asked the selectmen why certain parcels were put up for sale and not others, he "couldn't get any answers,"

He also argues that the sales "should have been run by the Recreation Committee, the road crew or the Fire Department," to see if the parcels in question could have been put to other uses.

"I hate to tie (the selectmen's) As the article is currently written, hands," he said, "but there's just too many things they never took the time to examine."

User fees ineffective?

Seames is also calling for the elimination of the fees charged for disposing of brown goods (stereos, sofas, mattresses, etc.) at the stump dump the town shares with Woodstock.

Bartlett said that such user fees offset approximately $4,000 of the $11,000 it cost the two towns to get rid of such items during the past eight months.

Seames, however, argues that the user fees are enough of an inconvenience that they are leading to people disposing of brown goods illegally in the woods and along roadways. Other people, he said, are collecting such trash in personal junk piles on their property, piles that are a potential hazard to firefighters.

Eliminating the fees, Seames contends, will not cost individual taxpayers a significant amount of money, but it would help to control illegal disposal.

Budget steady

The proposed municipal budget for 1994 (not including school and county levies) is down $2,000 from last year, to $349,584.

When the estimated figures for school and county taxes and overlay are added in, the selectmen are projecting a total town budget for the year of $914,584, up $33,876 from last year's budget of

The selectmen are also asking voters to approve taking $130,000 from fund balance. Of that amount, $105,000 is identical to amounts taken out last year -- to cover emergencies ($5,000), to pay for the town revaluation ($25,000) and to offset town taxes ($75,000).

The additional $25,000 the selectmen are recommending be taken from fund balance this year is to make up for a mistake in setting the 1993 tax commitment.

Pay hikes

This year's budget also recommends raises (ranging from 20 to 50 cents per hour) for town employees, and $50 per year increases in the stipends for planning board mem-

It has been three years since town employees received a pay increase Bartlett noted.

In addition, the proposed budget includes $2,500 for town office equipment (up $2,000), $4,000 for the recreation committee (up $1,000) and a new appropriation of $2,500 to correct a drainage problem in the Municipal Building base-

Town officers

One selectmen and two school committee members will be elected Saturday.

Selectman Harry Swan Jr. is seeking a second three-year term.

And SAD44 directors Susan Gordon and Amy Chapman will also seek reelection -- Gordon for a full three-year term; Chapman for the one year remaining on the term of Marjorie Kessler, who Chapman was appointed to replace when Kessler resigned.

No other candidates have formally announced for the selectman or school directors seats, nor has anyone challenged the incumbent in any of the town-employee positions that will be filled Saturday.

The Greenwood annual Town Meeting will begin at 10 a.m. in the Town Hall.

surplus and $40,000 ($0) from the tree growth account.

New purchases, higher road costs Voters Monday will be asked to purchase $10,000 in computer equipment and a new $125,000 tanker truck for the town's Fire De-

To pay for the tanker, selectmen plan to raise $59,651 at Town Meeting and take $22,349 from the town's fire truck reserve, $40,000 from the tree growth reimbursement account and $3,035 from property tax relief funds.

"We have the money to do it without increasing taxes," said Town Manager Vern Maxfield.

Maxfield said the $10,000 computer request stems from the fact that the town computer is eight years old and cannot run much of the new software available for tax billing systems. If approved, the town would buy a new computer with increased hard drive capacity, he said.

The winter roads account is also on the rise. Last year, voters approved $65,000 for winter road maintenance. The account has run over the past few years, Maxfield said, and this year selectmen are asking for $70,000. Last year, the town spent more than $72,000 on winter road maintenance.

The board has also created a new account to pay for municipal garage utilities,

In the past, the cost of lights and heat for the garage has been shared by the highway and fire departments. This year, selectmen are asking voters to set aside $5,000 to pay garage utilities.
"The need is there," Maxfield said. "It would in effect give more money to the highway and fire department accounts. The Fire Department is still buying equipment to keep up with federal and state requirements. They need more funds, and this would help in a small

New on this year's Town Meeting warrant is a request by the Concord Pond Association to rebuild a 3,2 mile stretch of the Concord Pond Road. No dollar amount or selectmen's recommendation is included with the request.

"This would be an expensive job," Maxfield said. "We'll have an estimate at Town Meeting. There's no way we could do the entire job this year. The board feels the road is in fair shape for a dirt road."

Voters will also be asked to approve $52,350 for general government expenses, which includes a $2,200 pay increase for Maxfield. bringing his salary to $24,200. A proposed $1,420 increase for the town's deputy clerk, would bring her salary to $16,500. The cost of health insurance for town employees is also on the rise, from $20,000 to $26,000.

Other municipal requests include: $80,000 for summer roads and tarring expenses, $54,220 for operation of the Greenwood/Woodstock transfer station, $5,500 to fence the town's athletic fields and $20,000 to help expand the Whitman Memorial Library.

Ordinance changes

Voters will once again be asked to allow Planning Board members to remain on the board for more than one five-year term. Last year, townspeople turned down the request, which had the effect of unseating several long-term members of the board.

The Planning Board is also proposing dropping the minimum 10-foot property line setback requirement from the town's building ot ordinance.

The change would apply to residential lots, Maxfield said, but not the town's subdivision ordinance.

The Planning Board will also ask for an ordinance change that would bring anyone with plans for new construction before the board for a permit. The current ordinance requires a permit only for projects valued in excess of $1,000.

New construction is being defined as business or residential additions, garages or barns.

Elections

Voters will elect a selectman. SAD44 director and library trustee, Monday.

Selectman Percy Monk will seek reelection, Maxfield said, and Steve Bies has also declared candidacy for the seat.

Wednesday, March 23, 1994

New to this year's warrant is an article asking voters to approve purchasing the town's landfill site from James River for $700.

The town's selectmen have been negotiating with the paper company for the land during the past few years. If voters approve the purchase, selectmen plan to eventually establish a transfer station at the site, according to selectman Constance Gagnon.

For the first time in recent years, the selectmen will also ask voters to establish a Capital Equipment Reserve Account. Selectmen are proposing $5,000 this year for the new account. The money will probably go eventually toward purchas-

Voters will also be asked to purchase a backhoe/loader. The article was placed on the warrant by petition, Gagnon said. Selectmen are recommending against it.

Other proposed municipal expenses include $13,000 for Town Office expenses, $6,000 for insurance, $10,000 for snow removal, $6,000 to run the landfill and $1,000 for general assistance.

As of Monday, the town's school budget for tuition to SAD44 and transportation costs had not yet been finalized.

Ron Jenkins, Upton state agent and SAD44 superintendent, said the school committee's transportation cost will go up dramatically this year. The town has two kindergarten students who will need midday transportation, he said. Last year, the town had no kindergarten students, he said.

The Bethel Library

The staff at the Bethel Library has been learning the ins and outs of the new IBM-compatible computer, with the patient guidance of Buzz Gamble. Some school children have begun to use the encyclopedia on the CD-ROM, and soon the software will be arriving for the MaineCat inter-library loan pro-

A correction from the March 16 article. Mike O'Donnell donated a used laser printer to use as a backup for the new computer, and Mary Jo donated the "Casablanca."

There are six new audio tapes in the permanent collection, a gift from Linda Gamble: "Truman" by McCullough, "Snow in April" by Pilcher, "It Doesn't Take A Hero" by Schwarzkopf, "Tangled Vines" by Dailey, "The Stars Shine Down" by Sheldon, and "McNally's Luck" by Sanders.

Other donations of books were made by Suzanne Taylor, John Head, and Jean Taber, and the Cross Country Quilters gave "Quilting School" by Ann Poe. A generous donation to the Reading Committee's book budget was made by John and Jan Todd. Thanks to all of these library supporters who give so much to the Bethel Library.

Rotary Club notes:

As the snow slowly melts under our feet, Sunday River Ski Area makes more of it under our skis. At this week's Rotary meeting, Burt Mills, director of snowmaking at Sunday River, shared the ski area's snowmaking history.

From its beginning days over 20 years ago, to its modern, new hightech equipment of today, to its future plans and dreams, Burt explained the training programs, showed equipment and clothing used, and even threw in a few "trade secrets" about the snowmaking pro-

Rotarians and guests asked many questions concerning the operations, including what percentage of the lift ticket he estimated went to the cost of the snowmaking itself. It was a fascinating presentation of an incredible science.

Guests in attendance were: Rotarians David Longstaff and Valerie Colley from Oxford Hills, Al and Barbara Hammond from Charlotte, PEI, and guests, Michael

'DO YOUR OWN DIVORCE'

In its effort to help those who cannot afford a lawyer obtain access to the courts to resolve family matters. Pine Tree Legal Assistance, Inc., has published the newly updated edition of the book, "Do Your Own Divorce in Maine."

The new edition provides step-bystep instructions for handling a divorce in court and for modifying a divorce judgment, including modifying child support obligations. In addition, the new edition helps parents who had children out of wedlock obtain court orders to resolve custody, visitation, and child support issues.

The number of people who are going to court without a lawyer to resolve family matters has increased dramatically, according to Pine Tree staff attorney Mary Henderson, yet the process has become more and more complicated. The book is designed to help people decide whether they should hire a lawyer, help them understand some of the legal issues in family matters, and walk them, step by step, through the process.

The new edition is available in libraries and in bookstores for $22.

Testani and Hillary Harrison. For "Rotary Information," Dan

Hart gave a summary of the Career Day results at Telstar last week. Fifty presenters shared their time, knowledge, and educational requirements with hundreds of freshman students from Telstar, Dirigo, Mountain Valley, Bridgton, and representatives from NOVA.

Many Rotarians devoted time and energy that day, as presenters or hosts, as well as in preparation. Dan mentioned the dedicated presenters that repeatedly return each year and concluded that this fifth annual Career Day was a great success -thanks to all who were involved, including the students themselves.

President Harrison extended an in-
